Contrast in experience

Folk touts time on bench and private sector; Nabinger

By MIKE HIBBARD
mhubbard@fltimes.com

WATERLOO — The two men squaring off Tuesday in a three-party primary election for Seneca County district attorney are touting their experience — albeit in different ways.

Christopher Folk is leaning on the combination of his seven years as Waterloo town judge and his managerial skills in the high-tech sector, which he believes can improve how the DA's office runs.

"One of the things I bring to the table is efficiency. I can look at situations and am not the type of person to say we should do it this way because we've always done it this way," he said. "When you think about what the DA's day consists of, a very small amount of time is spent in the courtroom. Management is a big part of the job and increasing operational efficiency."

Folk's opponent, John Nabinger, is touting his more than two decades of experience as a prosecutor and defense attorney.

"The fact is I have 21 years as a criminal law attorney — six on the prosecution side and 15 on the defense side. This is all I've done," GENEVA — Mike Pinco has no delusions about his radio station becoming a ratings giant. Nor does he envision his venture making a fortune in advertising.

"What I see in this station is twofold," Pinco said. "No. 1 is entertainment. I want to give people what they remember. Two is to help somebody."

"I'm not concerned about making money. I'm having a great time, and it's keeping me busy."

DEC says steps to improve wastewater plant operations are implemented

By DAVID L. SHAW
dshaw@fltimes.com

PENN YAN — The village is complying with the terms and schedule of a Nov. 13, 2017, consent order related to the mistaken discharge of 35,000 gallons of wastewater treatment plant sludge into the Keuka Outlet.

That was the update provided by the state Department of Environmental Conservation this month. The DEC issued the consent order after the village violated its discharge permit in August 2017.

The DEC said the village has paid a $5,000 fine and taken required steps to ensure that such an incident does not happen again. The consent order mandated additional measures to improve treatment plant performance and eliminate the chance of exceeding plant effluent limits; the DEC said the village has done that as well.

Under terms of the order, DEC officials said the village has met the following requirements:

- A spill prevention plan. Multiple alarms and procedures have been put in place that should prevent a similar sludge spill from happening again.

McDonald's 2015

Hepatitis A class action case settled

By DAVID L. SHAW
dshaw@fltimes.com

SENECA FALLS — Litigation involving a 2015 Hepatitis A scare at the McDonald's Restaurant on Mound Road has been settled.

Tuesday, State Supreme Court Justice Daniel Doyle approved a final order certifying a class of 1,073 plaintiffs and a settlement of just under $240 for each plaintiff. The June 18 hearing was to determine whether the proposed settlement is fair, reasonable and adequate and, if so, whether Doyle should issue a final judgment order.

An employee of the restaurant in the fall of 2015 was found to have had Hepatitis A while at work.

That could have infected those who consumed food or drink from Oct. 31 to Nov. 8, 2015 and later obtained a Hepatitis A blood test and immune globulin or Hepatitis A virus vaccine within 14 day of consuming the food or drink products between Oct. 31 and Nov. 8, and did not afterwards become infected with the Hepatitis A virus.

Special clinics were set up at Mynderse Academy the week-end after the event was made known and shots were also offered at the County Office Building in Waterloo.

A class action lawsuit was filed against the restaurant in November 2015.

Notices were mailed to 2,875 potential class members.

In April, a settlement amount of $250,000 was proposed. An effort was made to reach out to others who may have consumed food or drink

Geneva Chamber celebrates golf tourney success

By STEVE BUCHIERE sbuchiere@fittimes.com

GENEVA — The Geneva Area Chamber of Commerce said it hosted its most successful golf tournament to date.

The 2019 Chamber Cup Golf Tournament, sponsored by Hobart and William Smith Colleges, was held on Wednesday, May 22 at Silver Creek Golf Course in Waterloo.

Celebrating its theme of Around OUR World in 18 Holes, the event featured over 100 chamber members, as well as local representatives and community partners, said Chamber President Miranda Odell.

“We are humbled by, and grateful for, the outstanding support of our sponsors, and we are so proud of what this tournament has grown to be,” said Odell. “A wonderful assortment of chamber members, partners and volunteers are involved with this event from day one, and they are the ones who have truly made this such a success, and who we are most appreciative of.”

She said the event — one of its three major fundraisers — has grown significantly over the years, drawing support and participation through golf teams as well as on-course vendor stations featuring a variety of networking games and interactive activities to keep both golfers and the non-golfers engaged.

She said this year’s on-course activities and interactive stations included tasting stations from the Cayuga Lake Wine Trail and Geneva Gelato; a live broadcast from the Finger Lakes Radio Group; an onsite vehicle by Tradition Chevrolet; meet-and-greet stations by Finger Lakes Partners Insurance; Lyons National Bank; Reliant Community Federal Credit Union; Staples; the Watkins Glen Harbor Hotel; Wegmans of Geneva; a photo booth by Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

However, Odell said that perhaps the highlight and most popular booth on the course was the addition of Geneva Red Wings. They had players and managers on site, and they featured a speed-radar pitching contest.

Hobart and William Smith Colleges is the event’s primary sponsor.

“HWS is proud to support the 2019 Chamber Cup, which embodies so much of what’s great about our community,” said Robb Flowers, HWS vice president for campus life. “A picturesque setting, a celebration of our area’s thriving businesses, outstanding local food and beverages and most of all, the many friends and neighbors who call Geneva home — it all adds up to a wonderful event that highlights our great city and the region.”

Odell said HWS has been an avid chamber supporter over the years.

The Chamber also thanked Tradition Chevrolet, Walmart Geneva Supercenter and Geneva Wegmans for their sponsorship of this year’s golf tournament.

Odell said the 2019 tournament also saw the largest turnout of volunteers to date. Volunteers assisted with planning and “played a critical role in the execution of duties during the day,” from helping at registration to hosting each of the on-course games.

The Chamber also thanked the volunteers and their organizations who participated in the event, as well as the following businesses for their donations and support: Red Jacket Orchards Fruits Outlet; Finger Lakes Partners Insurance ; Littlejohn Orthodontics; Five Star Bank; Silver Creek Golf Course; Sjoblom Photography; Tierney Pension Administration, Trombley Tire & Auto Services inc, LLC; Geneva Walmart; and Zotos International.

Griswold honored for advancing fiber broadband

By STEVE BUCHIERE sbuchiere@fittimes.com

PHELPS — The leader of a 99-year-old company spearheading high-speed broadband in the region has been honored for advancing the industry.

Paul Griswold, president and CEO of Ontario & Trumansburg Telephone Companies, was named the 16th recipient of the FTTXcel-lence Award at the Fiber Connect Conference and Expo in Orlando, Fla. The company said Griswold was recognized for “significantly advancing the use of optical broadband access network technology.”

He was selected by a panel of judges representing the Fiber Broadband Association, Corning Inc., Lightwave (an industry news site) and producers of the Fiber Connect Conference and Expo.

“I am humbled and honored to be nominated and judged by my peers to receive this prestigious award,”

Griswold

Griswold said. “I share this honor with the leadership team and employees at OTTC, who work with me every day to expand broadband access network technology to more customers across upstate New York.”

OTTC recently completed a fiber-to-the-home project allowing 11,000 residences to access its broadband network, with a goal of another 100,000 homes by the end of the year.

Among the communities that now have access to OTTC’s network are the villages of Phelps and Clifton Springs. The company is expanding services in the Trumansburg area in Tompkins County, where the company also has significant operations, as well as southern Seneca County.

The company said an industry peer nominated Griswold for the award, saying that at “a time when many network operators are delaying network investments and extending the life of their copper infrastructure,” OTTC is expanding its fiber-optic network.

In addition to the award, a $5,000 donation was given in Griswold’s name to U.S. Ignite, a nonprofit organization that fosters the creation of next-generation internet applications “that provide transformative public benefit.”

Griswold noted in a January interview with the Finger Lakes Times that customers are moving away from cable and satellite TV to internet-based services such as YouTube TV that have many of the same offerings at more competitive prices. However, he noted that to access those services customers need a high-speed broadband network that can handle a large amount of data from multiple sources in the home — from smart TVs and computers to security systems.

Around the Nation

National Summary: A swath of severe thunderstorms, a few of which may produce tornadoes, is forecast to extend from southern New England to the Deep South today. Weekend Weather Watch

Clear but a bit cooler than normal

The eastern United States will continue to be subject to a parade of weather systems. However, the Finger Lakes will be between systems this weekend as high pressure noses in.

This high pressure will slide in from the northwest on Friday behind today's rain maker. Cool northwest winds will be blustery on Friday and will linger into Saturday.

The wind will counteract the clear skies Friday night and keep temperatures in the low 50s for the start of the weekend. This is a bit below the normal daily low for Saturday in Geneva, which is 59 degrees. The record low will be quite safe, coming in at 43 in 1992.

Skies will remain sunny throughout the day with just a few puffy fair weather clouds during the late morning and afternoon hours.

Northwest winds will gust to 30 mph during the morning hours. Afternoon winds will be a touch less, with top gusts around 25 mph, also from the northwest.

The afternoon high also will be below normal. Expect temperatures to top out near or just above 70 degrees, while the average high is set at 78. Like with the morning, 1992 was much colder, with a record low maximum of just 60 degrees.

Clear skies and light wind Saturday night will allow temperatures to drop back into the 50s

By DREW MONTREUIL

fingerlakesweather@gmail.com

once more. Warm air aloft will return before sunrise, serving as a limit to how cold it will get.

Sunday's winds should be very light as the high pressure center moves overhead. Top gusts should be only 10-15 mph. As is frequently the case with winds this light, the wind direction will be variable.

Skies should again be sun-filled from start to finish. Without the constant stream of cool air from the northwest, temperatures will bounce back nicely for Sunday afternoon, ending up right about where they should be. Look for highs to reach the upper 70s.

Sunday night should be dry though clouds will start to show up. By Monday morning, clouds will be thick, and rain will be pushing back into the region from the west.

New York State in Brief

DA: Man wielding starter pistol killed by officer

SYRACUSE (AP) — A prosecutor says a 74-year-old man fatally shot by police after appearing to point a gun at officers was actually holding a starter pistol.

Onondaga County District Attorney William Fitzpatrick told Syracuse.com it was unclear why DeWayne Watkins apparently pointed the starter pistol at officers Tuesday morning at his residence in Syracuse.

Police had been called to the home to back up firefighters responding to a medical call.

Fitzpatrick said the gun appeared real to the unidentified officer who fired several shots at Watkins.

Watkins was taken to a hospital before dying from his injuries.

Syracuse Mayor Ben Walsh said it was "a sad day for the community."

Walsh said one officer involved in the incident is on paid administrative leave, which is the protocol for officer-involved shootings.

Mother gets 15 years in death of infant son

SCHENECTADY (AP) — An upstate New York woman who admitted to killing her three-month-old son has been sentenced to 15 years in state prison.

Heaven Puleski was sentenced in court Tuesday, two months after pleading guilty to first-degree manslaughter under a plea deal.

The 39-year-old woman had admitted to killing her son, Rayen, last summer and discarding his body in a plastic bag in a hole behind her home in Schenectady.

The baby had been missing for weeks before the remains were found.

Daughter accused of strangling mother with vacuum cord

CENTRAL ISLIP (AP) — Police on Long Island say a 57-year-old woman has been arrested on murder charges for strangling her mother with a vacuum cleaner cord.

Suffolk County police say Sharon Easter called 911 at about 8 a.m. Tuesday and told the operator she had killed her mother at the Central Islip home they shared.

When officers arrived on the scene, police say they found 76-year-old Dorothy Easter dead of strangulation wounds.

Det. Lt. Kevin Beyrer of the Suffolk Homicide Squad said investigators believe the daughter had "some mental health issues."

FL Health delivers $10.29 million in charity care and community benefit Finger Lakes Health's 2018 Report to the Community — Healthy Citizens Create a Vibrant Community, outlines $10.29 million in charity care and community benefit for 2017.

The report outlines the health system's far-reaching impact from community health to economic impact. The report is now available online by visiting www.flhealth.org/caring-for-community.

The report details how Finger Lakes Health focuses its resources and efforts on the areas of health and wellness in our communities and the economic impact of Finger Lakes Health in our communities.

Finger Lakes Health's 2018 "Report to the Community" reminds the community that as a community-owned, not-for profit, the health system delivers care to all members of our community, regardless of their ability to pay.

In 2017, $2.27 million in financial aid (underwriting healthcare for patients in our community who are unable to pay for needed services) was provided at Geneva General and Soldiers & Sailors Memorial Hospitals. That charity care, coupled with the health system's other community benefit, totaled $10.29 million in 2017.

For information on Finger Lakes Health's Financial Aid Program, eligibility criteria and applications, call (315) 787-4150.

Additionally, the report summarizes Finger Lakes Health's economic impact on area communities through 1,900 jobs at Geneva General Hospital with a payroll of $94,175,000, and 600 jobs at Soldiers & Sailors Memorial Hospital with a $20,110,000 payroll. Indirectly, the jobs supported by GGH generated $26,000,000 in tax dollars, and the jobs supported by Soldiers & Sailors generated $7,300,000 in tax dollars, both resulting in stimulation of the economies of our communities.

The report further outlines how the health system joins the local county public health departments for the counties it serves, along with other community partners to conduct needs assessments, to determine the health priorities and establish improvement plans to meet those priorities.

Priorities outlined in the community report are: chronic disease, specifically hypertension and obesity, and substance abuse. Some of Finger Lakes Health's outreach initiatives that have targeted these priorities include:

- Offered the Diabetes Prevention Program — free educational sessions to community members with risk factors for diabetes and those who are pre-diabetic, including nutrition, exercise and other tips to prevent diabetes and lose weight.

- Provided one-on-one counseling to patients living with diabetes, educational classes for patients and their support person and continuous glucose monitoring services.

- Provided Blood Pressure Screenings — nurses provide free blood pressures at various locations in the community, including Our Lady of Peace Parish, the Stroke Support Group and the Community Lunch program in Geneva.

- Had all of its primary care physician practices participating in the Regional Blood Pressure Registry being overseen by Common Ground Health in an effort to increase the percentage of patients with hypertension who have controlled their blood pressure.

- Provided speakers for Chat & Snack at the YMCA on health and wellness topics, such as Vein Insufficiency & Treatments, Fall Prevention, Stroke Symptoms & Prevention, Osteoporosis Risk Factors & Prevention.

- Provided educational health information on topics such as stroke symptoms, diabetes prevention, hypertension, and others, in its community health magazine, Thrive, which is mailed to more than 90,000 homes in our service area twice each year.

- Offered "Finger Lakes Health Matters", an educational radio show that airs 26 times each year on the regional Finger Lakes Radio Network featuring Finger Lakes Health professionals speaking to a wide range of health topics, including stroke, diabetes, weight loss, and others.

- Used social media, such as Facebook and other digital strategies including an electronic newsletter, to share health and wellness information with our communities.

- Delivered excellent stroke care with Geneva General Hospital being an accredited Joint Commission and New York State-designated Stroke Center.

In addition to viewing the report online, copies of the report can also be obtained by contacting the Community Services office at Finger Lakes Health, (315) 787-4053.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORToole ‘trustworthy, professional,’ fair to others

To the Editor:

I came to the Geneva area in 1991 to become Vice-President/General Manager of Elderlee Inc., a manufacturer of concrete pipe, galvanizer, highway guardrails and signs and their installation throughout New York state. Over the past 28 years, I have dealt with Lisa Toole in business and personal issues.

I have found Lisa Toole to be trustworthy, most professional, extremely knowledgeable of the law and focused on her clients' satisfaction. On a visit to her courtroom, I observed her conduct with the cases presented before her. She impressed me with her knowledge of the law, as well as the fairness, respect, and judicial decorum toward others.

Lisa Toole has the experience, skill sets, motivation and intellect to become the next Supervising City Judge of Geneva.

Please vote for LISA TOOLE on primary day, Tuesday, June 25. YOUR VOTE COUNTS.

KENNETH GREGORY
GenevaNabinger's experience makes him right for DA position

To the Editor:

I have known John Nabinger since he came to work as an assistant district attorney for the Seneca County District Attorney's Office in January 1998. John has prosecuted hundreds of felony cases in both the Seneca County District Attorney's Office (1/98-3/01) and the Onondaga County District Attorney's Office (4/01-1/04). John has been the assistant public defender for Seneca County from January 2004 to the present. He has represented defendants in thousands of felony cases and in numerous trials over the past 15 years.

In my position as a court assistant and then as the chief clerk of the Seneca Supreme & County Courts and commissioner of jurors, I have seen firsthand John's exceptional work in Seneca County Court as both an assistant district attorney and as an assistant public defender. He was always well prepared for his felony cases and conducted himself in a professional manner. John worked well with all other counsel and all courthouse personnel.

John's vast experience in handling all types of felony cases will be a great asset to him in the DA's position. John has been practicing criminal law for over 20 years and has been working for the people of Seneca County for 18 years.

It is my opinion, having over 18 years of working in the State Court System myself (14 of those years spent in the Seneca County Courts), that JOHN NABINGER is the BEST CANDIDATE to become the next Seneca County District Attorney.

ELIZABETH C. YOUNG
Former Chief Clerk of Seneca Supreme & County Courts & Commissioner of Jurors (Ret.)

Be sure to take care of American flag properly

To the Editor and fellow Finger Laker:

My name is Ryan Smith I am a senior at Penn Yan Academy and Student Council president; however I write you today as a neighbor and in no other capacity. You may have seen me at area events or cruising on Keuka Lake.

While driving around the Finger Lakes I've noticed many of you fly our nation's flag outside your homes. While commendable, I am too often disappointed to find many of those star-spangled banners to be faded and or tattered. I want to use this opportunity to remind you that it is imperative that faded colors be taken down and properly disposed of.

Our flag represents democracy and liberty; it is an emblem reminding us of the sacrifice of those who fought for it. When the flag has become tattered it has reached the end of its life. Just as we properly dispose of our dead in a dignified way, we must likewise retire and dispose of our flags.

I ask you simply to regularly check your flag for fading and or tattering. If you find that it has reached the end of its life you may bring it to your local American Legion post. The Legion will see to a proper retirement for your banner. I also encourage you to replace it with a new flag.

As Americans the flag has great value to us. It is important that we treat it with the same respect in its retirement as we do when in service. Thank you for your consideration. Have a safe and fun summer!

RYAN A. SMITH
Penn YanOn Russia collusion, Trump right, Stephanopoulos wrong

WASHINGTON — In an extraordinary interview, President Trump and ABC News anchor George Stephanopoulos repeatedly sparred over whether special counsel Robert Mueller had cleared Trump of collusion with Russia. “Are you trying to say now that there was collusion even though he said there was no collusion?” Trump asked Stephanopoulos while riding in his limousine. “He didn’t say that,” Stephanopoulos replied. Later, Trump again asserted, “He said there was no collusion. George, read the report.” Stephanopoulos answered, “He said he explicitly didn’t look at collusion ... He said there was insufficient evidence that said there was a conspiracy. I read every page.”

Trump is right, and Stephanopolous is wrong: Mueller did clear the president of colluding with Russia.

First, Trump is using the word “collusion” because the media repeatedly used it during the investigation. As Mueller points out in his report, “the term has frequently been invoked in public reporting about the investigation” (including, I would add, by Stephanopolous on ABC). There’s a reason for that. “Collusion” is plain English for what most Trump critics alleged: that he worked with Russia to steal the 2016 election.

Mueller declared that since “collusion is not a specific offense or theory of liability found in the United States Code,” he instead focused on the word “coordination.” “We addressed the factual question whether members of the Trump Campaign ‘coordinat[ed]’ — a term that appears in the appointment order — with Russian election interference activities,” Mueller wrote, adding that “we understood coordination to require an agreement — tacit or express — between the Trump Campaign and the Russian government on election interference. We applied the term coordination in that sense when stating in the report that the investigation did not establish that the Trump Campaign coordinated with the Russian government in its election interference activities.”

So, yes, Trump would be more precise to say that Mueller found that there was “no coordination” rather than “no collusion.” But to any normal viewer without a law degree, the meaning is the same. As Mueller made clear, “In this investigation, the evidence does not establish that the President was involved in an underlying crime related to Russian election interference.” Trump was 100 percent correct when he told Stephanopoulos,

“There was no crime. There was no Russia collusion. There was no Russia, I’ll put it in your language, conspiracy, which is even better than collusion. You know, the word ‘collusion’ is a softer word than ‘conspiracy.’” No crime, no collusion, no conspiracy — however you want to phrase it, the result is the same: He didn’t do it. Period.

And when Stephanopoulos says that the Mueller report found only that “there was insufficient evidence” of a conspiracy with Russia, he is, knowingly or not, helping the Trump-Russia truthers who exploit the word “insufficient” to continue arguing that the president hasn’t been cleared. They insist — the Mueller report notwithstanding — that it is still possible that Trump was working with the Russians. No, given the scope of Mueller’s investigation, it’s not possible.

The fact is Mueller led a team of 19 lawyers, who were in turn supported by 40 FBI agents, intelligence analysts, forensic accountants and other professional staff. His team reviewed more than 1.4 million pages of documents provided by the White House and Trump’s campaign and spent countless hours interviewing senior White House officials. As Attorney General William Barr pointed out, they “issued more than 2,800 subpoenas, executed nearly 500 search warrants, obtained more than 230 orders for communication records, issued almost 50 orders authorizing use of pen registers, made 13 requests to foreign governments for evidence, and interviewed approximately 500 witnesses.” If, after all that, they did not find evidence sufficient to establish that Trump conspired with Russia, then Trump is right to say he has been cleared.

In our democracy, we are considered innocent until proven guilty. If a prosecutor not only fails to prove you guilty, but after a lengthy investigation, determines that he cannot even establish that a crime has been committed, then guess what? You’ve been cleared. Denying this is deeply irresponsible. To suggest otherwise about anyone, including the president, is unfair and goes against American values.

Likability: don’t underestimate it

As we near the 2019 Democratic debates, I clearly remember one January 2008 Democratic presidential debate in New Hampshire — the site of the headline making exchange between Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama. To re-cap, the debate moderator asked Clinton whether she thought she had enough personal appeal to win over voters. But before she could answer, Obama broke in saying, “You’re likable enough.”

Evidently, enough voters thought Obama’s comment insensitive, and Clinton won the New Hampshire primary a few days later. Nevertheless, as we know, Obama won the general election — twice. And to this day, polls show him as an extremely likable ex-president, along with Abraham Lincoln, JFK and Ronald Reagan.

Likability has become an even more important trait today as we see the president of the United States hurling abusive insults at nearly everyone — near and far.

At Maryland’s Towson Town Center, where I walk for exercise, 87-year-old Marty Martinez is very likable. He is known as “the mayor,” since he is there nearly every morning, sitting on the same chair at the same table across from Starbucks. In addition to greeting everyone, in a perennial good mood, Marty reaches out to people of all ages. For example, last year when he discovered that a young worker at Starbucks had just graduated from college and would be spending a year teaching English in Madrid, Marty took the young man with his girlfriend to dinner at Tio Pepe’s to introduce him to Spanish food.

Then there is Sonny, who, when he’s not whizzing by at the mall (no one could keep up with him), volunteers at Sinai Hospital. Without breaking stride, he always greets me and others by name. Of course, there also is a woman who usually walks alone, looking angry and greeting no one. And there are others who only talk to one or two people. But the world would be a lot nicer if there were more people like Marty or like Doug, another walker, who, before he retired, worked in Parks and Recreation with former Mayor William Donald Schaefer. During intermission at a recent BSO concert, while Doug’s wife Florence and I chatted, Doug was greeting what seemed like half the audience, those he knew and, I am sure, others he didn’t.

On a broader stage, there is a wonderful news photo of likability, showing French President Emmanuel Macron sitting next to German Chancellor Angela Merkel during a ceremony at the Arc de Triomphe in Paris in November. Although Mr. Macron has his hand on Ms. Merkel’s knee, this is not a Me-Too moment! They are facing each other, obviously in deep conversation, and Ms. Merkel is grinning. Next to them, President Trump, his hands clasped in his lap, looks angrily into the distance, while Melania looks totally bored.

As for Mr. Macron and Ms. Merkel, international allies should share a close relationship, a genuinely likable relationship. Whether it was 9/11 or various wars, we have always depended upon our allies to help us. Unfortunately, Mr. Trump has managed to alienate our allies, preferring not-so-likable dictators, such as Russian President Vladimir Putin and the Supreme Leader of North Korea Kim Jong-un.

What makes someone more likable than someone else? When it comes to the British Royals, rumor has it that the queen slightly prefers granddaughter Meghan, Duchess of Sussex, Prince Harry’s wife, to granddaughter Kate, Duchess of Cambridge, Prince William’s wife. Both young women are beautiful and educated. Perhaps Meghan, once a popular TV and film actress, is more outgoing? Or, as the daughter of a black mother and a white father, does she have more empathy?

Basically, most people like others who are kind and caring, who are honest and loyal, who are tolerant, who are helpful and who always have a ready smile. The Burt Bacharach and Hal David 1965 song says: “What the world needs now is love, sweet love.” Today, in 2019, I think likability would do as well.

he said. “I’ve literally spent tens of thousands of hours in a courtroom. I don’t know Chris personally, but all my interactions with him have been good, including in his court when he was a judge. I don’t have any issues with Mr. Folk in that respect. I simply think he doesn’t currently have the experience that I do in the courtroom.”

Nabinger has the backing of the Seneca County Republican Committee and is the designated candidate on the Conservative and Independence lines. If he prevails on any or all of those lines in the primary, he moves on to the November general election.

Folk’s name also appears on the Republican ballot, and he is waging a write-in campaign on the Conservative and Independence lines. Regardless of the primary results, Folk will be in the November election on the Working Families and Libertarian lines.

The Democratic candidate in November is Acting District Attorney Mark Sinkiewicz. He was appointed to the position after former DA Barry Porsch was elected county judge last November.

year. He said he learned a lot about the DA’s office during that time.

“I loved being in the prosecution office. I think I could walk into any court in the county now and hit the ground running,” he said. “I’m deeply embedded in this community, both professionally and personally. I’ve lived here and worked here, and as a taxpayer I’ve gotten a feel for how things are.”

If elected, Folk said he would be a visible district attorney.

“A lot of people don’t understand what happens in our courts. I would like to let them know what the DA’s office does,” he said. “In my seven years as a judge I presided over a lot of bench trials and jury trials. I’ve been involved in the criminal justice system as much as I could be.”

Nabinger’s career began as an assistant Seneca County DA more than 20 years ago under then-DA

Donna Cathy. He did that for three years, then spent three more as an assistant Onondaga County DA. He returned to become Seneca County’s assistant public defender due to a family medical issue.

“When Mike Mirras became public defender, we struck up a great friendship and always stayed in touch. He suggested coming back here and working for him,” Nabinger said. “I wasn’t sure the switch to the defense side was something I was willing to do ... but I went ahead and did it, and it turned out to be a great experience.”

“This is what I’ve always wanted to do ... and with Porsch becoming a judge, that opened up an opportunity to come back to the prosecution side,” Nabinger continued. “People approached me about running for DA, and it’s really where I’ve always wanted to be.”

- A best management practices document. It was drafted to evaluate and minimize the potential for future illegal discharges to the onsite stormwater collection system that connects the the plant’s effluent outfall into Keuka Outlet, a stream that flows into Seneca Lake.

- An inflow and infiltration plan and report within three months of the consent order, and an additional two progress reports in a year’s time.

DEC officials said they will continue to provide comprehensive oversight of the implementation of the consent order. Additional penalties may be assessed if the village fails to comply with terms of the order.

Brent Bodine, the village’s director of Public Works, said he concurs with the DEC analysis, noting there are more steps to follow under terms of the schedule.

“We are still under the consent order,” Bodine said. “The village paid the fine, aware there could be additional fines if we are not in compliance with the order.”

He said the plant has installed a disinfection system and applied for a state grant to do an infiltration and inflow study to separate storm water from the sanitary sewers during times of heavy rainfall.

“It was a very competitive process, and we did not get awarded a grant,” Bodine said. “We plan to reapply for some $1.1 million from the Consolidated Funding Application process.”

The village has done some infiltration and inflow corrective action on its own, Bodine added.

The plant now has a notification system in place to warn of an open valve, and an alarm system to warn of a tank that is nearing overflow status.

PY board could vote on moratorium Friday

By MIKE HIBBARD
mhibbard@fltimes.com

PENN YAN — The Village Board has scheduled a special meeting Friday, and it could include a vote on a six-month moratorium for new senior citizen housing.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 a.m. at the village hall.

The board had a public hearing on the proposed moratorium Tuesday. The only person who spoke was attorney Alan Knauf. Knauf was opposed to the measure.

Knauf is representing developer David Genecco, who wants to build eight townhouse-style units for seniors on a parcel he owns on South Avenue in the village. The land is next to a large, neighboring parcel Genecco owns in the town of Milo, where he and another developer, Angelo Licciardello of Webster, plan to build 82 townhouse-style rental units. The town land is the former Keuka Estates Mobile Home Park.

Knauf filed an Article 78 lawsuit against the village and zoning board earlier this year, arguing the village wrongfully rejected Genecco’s plan to build the senior housing last year. Yates County Judge Jason Cook later ruled in favor of Genecco.

“I said, ‘Where the hell is Geneva?’ “ Pinco says with a laugh. “She had reservations at 2 o’clock, and it was like 11 in the morning. I said, ‘All right, I will take care of it.’ So I get in the car and I’m hauling to Geneva.”

Pinco said while Salotti’s daughter — her name, coincidentally, is Brooklyn — was having dinner with her friends, he and Salotti had dinner on their own.

“We’ve been together ever since,” he said.

Pinco moved to Geneva about a year ago and started his station several weeks ago. His music reflects what he heard during his upbringing.

“I love music,” he said. “I started playing guitar when I was about 11, and music was always important to me.

“I was the youngest of four siblings, and my sisters always played ‘50s and ‘60s rock-and-roll: Elvis Presley, The Beatles. It’s great stuff.”

Pinco’s station has several specialty segments, also.

From 5 to 9 p.m. Friday is “Old School Top 40 Hits,” while from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday is “Saturday Night Summer Jam.” On Sunday, Pinco plays Italian/American classics all day, and he has a live show, “Sunday Dinner with Brooklyn Mike,” from 9 a.m. to noon. The show replays from 5 to 8 p.m.

“My parents were the inspiration for the Sunday show. They were both immigrants,” he said. “On Sundays at my house it was all Italian music while my Mom was making the sauce and Sunday dinner.”

Pinco’s music comes from his days as a disc jockey in the Washington, D.C. area, Virginia, Maryland and beyond. At the time he was an aeronautics engineer in Virginia, a career that lasted more than 25 years.

On the weekends he was “DJ Brooklyn Mike.” He founded All Occasion

Music, a company that grew to employ six other DJs and worked 150 events a year, including weddings, corporate events and more.

He gave up the DJ business when he transferred — he worked for aerospace and defense giant Lockheed Martin — from Virginia to the Binghamton area. He later retired from work due to health issues.

Pinco’s radio station airs out of his home. It has about 300 followers so far, and he has heard from listeners in Australia, Afghanistan, Iraq, Italy, England, and Ireland.

He also wants to do public service announcement shows, and has 100 Proof Living (about alcoholism) lined up.

“If we can help one person with that show, we did our job,” he said.

In the meantime, Pinco is happy playing blasts from the past. And, he is hoping to get back into the DJ business through M&L Entertainment, which he formed with Salotti.

“Hopefully, the radio station gives people some entertainment,” he said. “I love Geneva and I would like to see this station grow.”

Fourth Annual Laurel House 5K

Spencer Tulis / Finger Lakes Times

A 5k run was held in Newark recently to benefit the Laurel House Comfort Care home. Standing together after completing the run are Elizabeth George of Newark and Billie Jo Ross of Farmington.

Times Sports Staff

NEWARK — Earlier this month, The Laurel House Comfort Care Home hosted their third annual 5k walk/run. The Laurel House provides end-of-life care to residents and their families free of charge. The 5K helped raise money for the House so they can continue their everyday operations, which is funded solely through charitable donations and fundraisers. Since the home operates free of charge for its residents and families, the average cost of running the home is $200,000, so donations are greatly appreciated. The Laurel House will also be hosting an event later this year. The Third Annual Laurel House Comfort Care Home Gala will be held on October 25, 2019. More details about the dinner can be found on their website. If you wish to donate, you can do so on their website by logging on to <http://laurelhousecomfortcare.org> and click the 'How to Help' tab. If you wish to send a check, their address is 224 Fair St. Newark, NY, 14513.

Snell chased in 1st, Sabathia wins 250th, Yankees sweep Rays

By JAKE SEINER
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Gary Sánchez hit a three-run homer to help chase Cy Young Award winner Blake Snell in the first inning, CC Sabathia got his 250th career win and the New York Yankees thumped the Tampa Bay Rays 12-1 Wednesday to complete a three-game sweep. Gleyber Torres added a grand slam during a six-run seventh inning, and New York three-hit Tampa Bay to win its fifth in a row and extend its lead the AL East over the second-place Rays by 3 1/2 games. Tampa Bay was swept for the second time this season — the other came against Boston in April. Snell (4-6) walked four, gave up two hits and was Sabathia charged with six runs while getting one out on 39 pitches in the shortest start of his career. He is the first reigning Cy Young winner to allow at least six runs and get no more than one out in a start, according to STATS. Colin Poche replaced the left-hander with the bases loaded, hit Gio Urshela with a pitch and allowed a two-run single to DJ LeMahieu before ending the inning. Snell's previous shortest start was one-plus inning against the Yankees on Sept. 26, 2017. Sabathia (4-4) pitched one-run ball over six innings. He struck out seven and allowed three hits and three walks. The left-hander has a 2.06 ERA in six starts against the Rays over the past two seasons. New York had just three hits during the six-run first inning. Sánchez's homer was his 21st in 54 games this season. The Yankees have homered in 22 consecutive games, three shy of the franchise record from 1941. After the rocky first, Tampa Bay's bullpen retired 16 straight until Adam Kolarek walked LeMahieu with one out in the seventh. That got the Yankees going all over again, with Sánchez hitting an RBI double and Torres delivering his first career slam while New York batted around for the second time. The Rays used eight relievers before moving third baseman Daniel Robertson to the mound to start the eighth. He pitched a 1-2-3 inning thanks to a double play. Jonathan Holder and Luis Cessa pitched hitless ball over the final three innings for New York. TRAINER'S ROOM Rays: INF Yandy Diaz was placed on the 10-day injured list with right hamstring tightness, retroactive to Monday. Newcomer Boyd gets 2 goals for US in 4-0 win over Guyana

By DAVE CAMPBELL
Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. — After newcomer Tyler Boyd scored early in the second half to give the United States a two-goal lead, the sure sign this was going to be a good night for the Americans was visible on Gyasi Zardes' face. A shot by Paul Arriola from just outside the box was headed by Guyana defender Terence Vancooten straight at Zardes' left eye. The ball ricocheted into the net as teammates celebrated around a stunned, grimacing Zardes. Finally, the Americans had some fun on the field again. Boyd scored two goals to guide the U.S. past

Boyd overmatched Guyana 4-0 to start the CONCACAF Gold Cup on Tuesday, getting this much-maligned team on track in its first competitive game in 20 months. "The first game of a tournament is always a little bit nervy," coach Gregg Berhalter said. "We told the guys, 'Enjoy the experience. It's competition time.'" Boyd, a 24-year-old attacker, played just his second match for the U.S. after a FIFA-approved switch of affiliation from New Zealand. His parents were able to take the long flight from his native country to attend the game. "Just a dream come true," Boyd said. "It's been years and years of work to get to this moment." Arriola had a goal and an assist, and Weston McKennie was awarded with an assist during an all-around strong performance before leaving with what appeared to be a left hamstring injury. Berhalter said it was a cramp, nothing serious. The Americans were on the attack for most of the game while generating a steady stream of prime scoring chances against a Guyana team making its Gold Cup debut, but even a decisive victory like this wasn't going to provide much insight into any progress being made under Berhalter, given Guyana's No. 177 ranking. Goalkeeper Zack Steffen made one save, in the 69th minute. With fan angst at a fever pitch and a young squad trying to find its way with a new, flashier style of play, though, there was plenty to be gained from, simply, winning. Especially after the Americans lost ugly in friendly earlier this month to Venezuela and Jamaica. Up next for the Americans in Group D on Saturday night in Cleveland is Trinidad and Tobago, the plucky islanders who beat them on Oct. 10, 2017, in the World Cup qualifier that kept them home last summer from Russia and triggered a reexamination of the entire program. Panama beat the Soca Warriors 2-0 in the first match on Tuesday. The U.S. has 33 wins, one loss and four draws in the group stage of the Gold Cup, losing only to Panama in 2011. Injuries kept likely starters Tyler Adams, John Brooks and DeAndre Yedlin off the Gold Cup roster, but McKennie and fellow 20-year-old Pulisic were on the field at kickoff with Bradley as a trio for the first time. Pulisic, the Pennsylvania star who's hoping to return the U.S. to international relevance, made his presence felt around the net despite not scoring. He was subbed out in the 62nd minute for Cristian Roldan. Arriola, the only player who has been in all of Berhalter's lineups since he took over six months ago, scored in the 28th minute. Boyd had an opportunity to immediately follow it after goalkeeper Akel Clarke pushed a shot to his right, but he wound up too hard and sent the ball sailing over the net and into the seats. The one-goal halftime lead gave Guyana some confidence. Boyd's 51st minute-goal marked the 1,000th in program history, in match No. 700. Then came the goofy goal by Zardes that broke Guyana's spirit. The Americans had plenty to be pleased about at the end of this one.

Carousel at Sonoma has once again been made part of course

By LORI A. CARTER
The Press Democrat

SONOMA — Michael Waltrip's 2019 practice run at Sonoma Raceway was infinitely more successful than his 1989 effort.

In pre-race action at the track leading up to this weekend's Toyota/Save Mart 350, the legendary stock car driver, now retired, chauffeured members of the media through the 12-turn, 2.52-mile road course in a cherry red Toyota Supra race car.

Thirty years ago, Waltrip didn't even make it to Turn 2 before flipping his Pontiac on a curve.

In qualifying sessions, drivers traded information on the course, new to Waltrip, then 26 years old.

"We were hearing stories, 'OK, if you hang a wheel off getting into the Carousel, you're gonna flip.' I'm like, 'What do you mean you're gonna flip?' How does that work?" he said.

"We saw cars do just that. One of the cars that did just that was me."

No worries — all the wheels were pointing in the right direction.

"We took a hammer and some duct tape and beat out the body and I raced that car on Sunday after-noon," he said, "and I finished in the top 10 with it.

"That was my first experience at Sonoma and probably one of my favorites."

Monday's practice runs with journalists weren't nearly as eventful. Which was just fine with this reporter.

Averaging about 60 mph, but pushing it over 130 on the straightaways, Waltrip broke in the new 2020 Supra GR, which will be available commercially this fall for $49,999 and up.

As part of the track's 50th anniversary celebration, the original track layout has returned -- and Waltrip had a ball zipping through it and scaring journalists more used to driving clunky news vans than curvy sports cars.

"Whooh!" said the Kentuckian, laughing his way through the turns and bumps of the track. "Hot!"

The two-seat Supra, the first U.S. model of the car in 21 years, sports a 335-horsepower turbo-charged inline 6-cylinder engine and 8-speed transmission with paddle shifters.

"Holy cow, that thing's got a lot of pep — and really handles well," the two-time Daytona 500 winner concluded.

The Carousel revved up Waltrip too.

Unveiled when the raceway opened in 1968, the Carousel brings back the raceway's signature sweeping downhill corner, plunging from Turn 4, down through Turns 5 and 6 and around a 200-degree-plus turn before dropping onto the longest straightaway into the Turn 7 hairpin.

NASCAR hasn't run the full course in Sonoma since 1997. This year's race will be 90 laps for a total of 226.8 miles.

"That Carousel was actually kinda cool, one of my favorite parts of the track," Waltrip said. "When I heard talk that it was coming back, I (thought I) can't wait for these young racers to experience it and see what it's really like."

He predicted more bumping and grinding around Turn 4.

"It's going to make it crazy ... because when you head toward the Carousel, you're going uphill. I remember back in the day when I was racing, I kept thinking, 'I hope that road is still up over that hill when I get there,' because you can't see what you're doing.

"In a competition, racing side by side and tight like these guys race, it will be really interesting to see how they handle it. I think we'll see more passing in that area of the race track than we have ever before."

Vanderbilt rides Rocker, Scott to 6-3 CWS win over Bulldogs

By ERIC OLSON
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — After being constantly reminded for more than a week about his no-hitter in the NCAA super regionals, Kumar Rocker found himself on the mound for the first time on a bigger stage at the College World Series.

Vanderbilt's 6-foot-4, 255-pound freshman star never let the pressure get to him, turning in another strong start and getting plenty of support from Stephen Scott's two home runs and four RBIs in a 6-3 victory over Mississippi State on Wednesday.

No. 2 national seed Commodores (56-11) gained the inside track to the best-of-three finals next week. They need a victory Friday or Saturday to advance.

Rocker, who struck out 19 against Duke on June 8 in the first no-hitter of the 20-year super-regional era, held the No. 6 Bulldogs (52-14) scoreless until Rowdey Jordan's two-out RBI single in the sixth inning. That ended Rocker's 19 2/3-inning shutout streak.

Rocker (11-5) used his fastball and a flummoxing breaking pitch to limit the Bulldogs to five hits. He walked one, hit a batter and struck out six before Patrick Raby took over to start the seventh. Rocker won his fifth straight start and is 9-1 over his last 10.

Scott hit a solo homer in the second inning and a three-run shot in the fifth to break open the meeting of SEC rivals. It was the 13th and 14th for the 6-hole batter.

Marshall Gilbert homered leading off the seventh against Raby and Mangum doubled and scored when Tanner Allen doubled past diving center fielder Pat DeMarco to make it 6-3.

It was the Commodores' second win of the season over MSU. The teams didn't meet in the regular season; Vandy won 1-0 in the SEC Tournament.

Ex-Ranger Kevin Hayes signs with Flyers

By STEPHEN WHYNO
AP Hockey Writer

Hayes

Kevin Hayes watched with significant interest as the Philadelphia Flyers made moves to get better right away.

Then he signed on the dotted line for the long term to add to those efforts.

Hayes signed a $50 million, seven-year contract with the Flyers on Wednesday that's worth $7.14 million a season. The 27-year-old is Philadelphia's third major addition this offseason after trading for defenseman Matt Niskanen and Justin Braun and is the most prominent sign yet that the franchise has shifted from building to trying to contend for a title.

"(Acquiring) Niskanen and Braun, it just shows that they're in a win-now mentality," Hayes said on a conference call Wednesday. "With the three moves they made in the last couple weeks, it just shows their fans and shows the team and the organization that they want to win right now and that factored into my decision, as well — being able to win."

The Flyers haven't won the Stanley Cup since 1975, now the fourth-longest drought in the NHL, and missed the playoffs four out of the past seven years. Former general manager Ron Hextall's regime was about drafting and developing, and now Chuck Fletcher is turning his attention to making Philadelphia a playoff contender again.

Committing this substantial price to Hayes shows that. The Flyers sent a fifth-round pick to Winnipeg for his exclusive negotiating rights and also traded defenseman Radko Gudas and second- and third-round picks to get Niskanen and Braun.

This was all part of the plan.

"We're stronger, we're deeper and we filled a lot of the holes we identified coming into the summer," Fletcher said.

"Certainly our expectation is we're a more competitive hockey club, but there's a lot of work to be done to take this collection of individuals and make it into a strong team."

Hayes becomes the Flyers' third-highest paid player behind captain Claude Giroux and winger Jakub Voracek and should step in as their new No. 2 center behind Sean Couturier. He's coming off a recording a career-high 55 points last season with the Rangers and Jets and has 92 goals and 137 assists in 381 regular-season NHL games.

"He checks a lot of boxes we were looking for," Fletcher said. "We like his size, we like his skill, we like his 200-foot game. We like his age: He's just entering the prime of his career and he plays a premium position at center. So we think he rounds out our forward group out and will give our coaching staff a lot of options going forward."

That coaching staff has a lot to do with why Hayes and the Flyers identified each other as a good fit. Hayes played under new Philadelphia coach Alain Vigneault for four seasons in New York, something that will ease his adjustment.

"We had a great relationship on and off the ice," Hayes said. "He demands hard work and if you play the correct way, he kinds of lets you play freely offensively, and that was a huge factor in the decision. Being comfortable with him just made the decision a lot easier."

The money doesn't hurt, either, and Hayes got a full no-movement clause in the first three years of the contract to protect against Seattle expansion. He'll be able to submit a 12-team no-trade list in the final four years.

Hayes could have waited until Sunday to talk to any interested club and pick his destination July 1. Instead, he said the familiarity with the Flyers, what he thought his role could be and his belief they can win sooner than later led him to forego unrestricted free agency.

"It was kind of a no-brainer," Hayes said. "I think Chuck and (president Paul Holmgren) are putting together a team that can do some damage and ultimately win the Stanley Cup."

After piggybacking on baseball, NFL stood tall in expansion

By SCHUYLER DIXON
AP Pro Football Writer

George Halas wanted an NFL team in Dallas, and in 1960 the influential founder of the Chicago Bears helped Clint Murchison get one. Less than 10 years later, a league that for decades piggybacked geographically on baseball went from 16 to 26 franchises in a merger with the rival American Football League, making plans to get even bigger on its way to replacing America's pastime as the country's favorite sport. Television fueled the success of both leagues in the decade before their 1970 merger, and expansion that pushed pro football into the deep South grew out of assurances from then-Commissioner Pete Rozelle that AFL franchises could stay in their existing cities.

"The availability of NFL games on free television even to this day is the single most important factor in the popularity and expansion of our sport," says Joe Browne, the league's longest-serving senior executive ever.

Within 20 years of the NFL's birth in 1920, the league settled into what is considered its original core of teams: Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Green Bay, New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Washington.

Before 1950, the only team with staying power south of Washington was in Los Angeles — and that was in part because Cleveland Rams owner Dan Reeves threatened to sue if he wasn't allowed to chase the Hollywood lights after his team won the championship in 1945, says Joe Horrigan, the NFL historian and recently retired Pro Football Hall of Fame executive director.

Between the Rams' move in 1946 and the debut of the Cowboys, along with the relocation of the Chicago Cardinals to St. Louis in 1960, the only addition outside the NFL's traditional geographic footprint was San Francisco in 1950 after the All-America Football Conference folded.

During those first 40 years, the comings and goings of franchises often were tied to baseball because of existing stadiums, Horrigan explains.

"Baseball was already established there and (NFL teams) could play in their stadiums and oftentimes even borrowed their names to create the illusions that they were affiliated with the baseball teams," he says. "The league was growing its own identity still and hadn't built a football stadium yet."

The additions of the Cowboys and Cardinals didn't change that. Dallas first played in the Cotton Bowl, a stadium built for and made famous by college football, another sport more popular with U.S. fans before the NFL's surge.

The Cardinals happened to have the same nickname as the baseball team at Sportsman's Park in St. Louis, with baseball ownership leading the bid for a new stadium that opened six years after the football team's move.

Even the Minnesota Vikings — an expansion partner with the Cowboys after the NFL swooped in on ownership expecting to get an AFL team — used a baseball-first stadium. They debuted in 1961 at Metropolitan Stadium, built in hopes of attracting an MLB team. The Twins moved from Washington the same year.

Browne says the thirst for more NFL teams led Lamar Hunt and Bud Adams to go after NFL expansion teams in the 1950s. When the renegade owners were rebuffed, they formed the eight-team AFL.

"The argument could be made either way that the announced start of the AFL resulted in these two teams," Browne says of the Cowboys and Vikings. "However, those two cities and several others were being discussed by the NFL for expansion for several years prior to 1960."

To help the 1966 merger agreement meet antitrust concerns in Congress, Rozelle promised that an NFL team already lined up in Atlanta and an AFL team in Miami could stay in those cities. The Falcons and Dolphins hit the field in '66.

About the same time, the league was interested in New Orleans because of the popularity of high school and college football in the South. And the Saints provided early signs of NFL teams standing on their own, knowing the football-only Louisiana Superdome was being planned. They began play in 1967.

Browne notes that a national survey then showed for the first time that pro football was listed as the fans' favorite sport over baseball.

"However, the NFL could not force expansion at too fast a rate because they wanted to maintain a competitive balance on the field and not have a watered-down product," he says.

Still, the AFL added Cincinnati in 1968, with former Browns boss Paul Brown owning the Bengals.

That was it for new franchise for another six years.

Enter Tampa Bay and Seattle.

Tampa already had built a smaller stadium that would house the Buccaneers, who were approved in 1974 for a debut two years later. Seattle, approved on roughly the same timeline, built the Kingdome hoping for football and baseball franchises. The Seahawks were the first team to play in it, and the Mariners soon followed.

The 28-team makeup lasted nearly two decades. It worked because the NFL far outpaced others sports in revenues and popularity.

That, naturally, didn't mean the league had no interest in further growth. Those 28 owners knew that expansion fees would reach nine figures compared with the $16 million the Bucs and Seahawks paid to join the party.

And they did. When Jacksonville and Carolina (located in Charlotte) were accepted as new members, it cost each franchise's owner $140 million. The Jaguars and Panthers began play in 1995 and both appeared (and lost) in their conference title games the next season.

Old (and older) friends

I'm watching them across the table, two beautiful young women, deep in conversation. I wish you could see them.

Michelle and Joanna have been friends since they were born. They live miles apart now, but keep in touch with emails and texts and phone calls and occasional posts on Facebook.

When Michelle comes "home" to visit her family, she and Joanna try to meet for lunch, just the two of them. They always have a lot of "catching up" to do, and it's easier to do alone, with no interruptions.

But this time they invited their mothers to join them. And not just because they're hoping we'll pick up the check.

Myra and I were friends before the girls were born. We met in church. She was a veteran mom with two young children, soon to have her third. I was a rookie, pregnant with my first.

I had a lot to learn. And Myra was born to teach. One day, I mentioned that a house on our block was for sale. Imagine my surprise when she and her husband bought that house and moved in across the street.

For the next 30 years, we were not just friends, but neighbors. The kind of neighbor who lets you borrow a cup of sugar knowing you won't pay it back. Who brings you snickerdoodles at Christmas and a casserole when you're sick. Who lets your kids run wild with her kids, or piles them in her station wagon and takes them to the park. Who can talk with you for hours in a circus of toddlers about hopes and dreams and faith and fears and how to stretch a pound of hamburger to feed a family of five plus four unexpected guests.

Michelle is Myra's fourth child. Joanna is my second. They were born less than a year apart and grew up together more like sisters than friends.

In some ways, Myra and I grew up together, too, sharing recipes and children and life.

Over the years, our lives took different directions. I worked for a newspaper. Myra taught school. The kids all grew up and moved on with their lives.

When I lost my husband to cancer, Myra wrapped me in her arms and made me promise to call her if I needed anything, or just wanted to talk.

In the long months that followed, it helped somehow just to look out my window and see the light in her kitchen.

Years later, when I remarried and moved to Nevada, Myra and I relied on our daughters to keep us posted on each other's news.

Last year, after my husband retired, we left Nevada and moved back to the old house. And the next day, Myra and her husband welcomed us home with a plate of snickerdoodles.

Have you ever noticed how quickly a year can pass? Myra and I had been meaning to get together to "catch up." But a year went by and it didn't happen. So our daughters invited us out to lunch.

Now here we sit, talking and laughing and eating, the four of us, sharing news of our families and remembering old times.

I told them my favorite Myra story. It goes like this:

We were camping, Myra and I and our seven kids. We had put the kids to bed in a tent and stayed up late talking, when a raccoon big enough to play in the NFL climbed on the picnic table and started eating our snacks. Myra gave me a look as if to say, "Watch this." Then she banged on the table with a stick.

The raccoon gave her a look, as if to say, "Seriously?" Then he bared his teeth and hissed in her face. And she dove into the tent.

We all laughed at that story, as we often have before. Then the girls went back to talking, just the two of them. And Myra and I picked where we'd left off.

Our daughters can talk the chicken off the bone. I wonder where they learned to do that?

Going to counseling alone can still help

DEAR ABBY: I have been friends with a guy, "Derrick," since high school. He recently confided that for the last few years of his marriage he has been involved in an on-again, off-again affair.

He also told me that for most of his marriage his wife has been putting him down, blaming him for all their problems, constantly accusing him of cheating (they have been married far longer than the affair has been going on) and not letting him see his friends. Abby, I have witnessed some of her behavior myself, and it explains why he seemed to drop off the earth after he signed his marriage certificate.

I don't know how to help him. He has tried to get his wife to agree to marriage counseling, but she refuses. He has young children, and he's afraid that if he tries to divorce her, she'll make sure he never sees them again.

She has spent years wearing him down and won. He's no longer the outgoing, happy person I used to know. He was always ready to help anyone who needed him, and I want to return the favor. How? — SUPPORTIVE FRIEND IN VERMONT

DEAR FRIEND: Suggest to your friend that because his wife refuses to go to marriage counseling does not mean he shouldn't go for individual counseling without her. If he does, it may be life-changing for him in a positive way because he may be able to reconnect with the person he was before he entered his emotionally abusive marriage. I can't promise his future will be problem-free after that, but he will be stronger and more able to cope with whatever his wife (or ex-wife) throws his way.

Topical steroids and sunscreen

DEAR DR. ROACH: I happened to be using a topical steroid for a bug bite when I got a sunburn on the area. To my surprise, the area that had the steroid on it had no redness or pain. Are topical steroids effective sunblocks? If so, why don't we use them? — W.R.R.

ANSWER: High-potency steroids are powerful anti-inflammatory drugs. Although they do not prevent the damage done to the skin by the sun, they do prevent the inflammatory reaction that shows up as redness and warmth on the skin. That reaction appears for hours or days after sun damage, depending on the degree of the sun exposure and the individual's protective skin pigment.

Broad-spectrum sunscreens do partially protect a person's DNA against the sun. In addition to avoiding excess sun by staying out of it, especially during the most dangerous time of the day, other strategies to reduce risk of sun damage and skin cancer include wearing sun-protective clothing and the regular, repeated and liberal use of UVA and UVB sunscreens.

High-potency topical steroids are not proven to and probably don't reduce the risk of skin cancer. More importantly, they have far too many side effects to use on a large area of the body. I don't recommend steroids in prevention nor treatment of sunburn.

DEAR DR. ROACH: Short of sounding like a conspiracy theorist, why hasn't the Food and Drug Administration approved sildenafil in a set dosage for blood pressure medication? I saw a decrease from 150/90 to 115/70 in a reading about an hour after taking a 20-mg tablet. That's a far superior result compared with the medications I am on. — J.I.C.

ANSWER: Sildenafil (Viagra) does have a blood-pressure-lowering effect in many men. However, the average effect is only about 8 points systolic and 6 points diastolic, far less than the 35 and 15 point drop you saw. Further, the blood pressure effect is gone in less than 8 hours. The goal for blood pressure medicine is continuous lowering without big ups and downs.

I'm not a big believer in conspiracy theories. If the medication were truly safe and effective for blood pressure control, you can be sure it would be marketed as a blood pressure pill with additional benefits for some people, just as tadalafil (Cialis) is marketed as a treatment for benign prostate enlargement, in addition to its proven role in treating erectile dysfunction. Tadalafil is also being studied as a potential benefit in heart failure treatment.

Freeze and zest the rest

Dear Heloise: I love using fresh lemon and lime slices, juice and zest in recipes and beverages. I buy them by the bagful when they are on sale. The problem? Using the product in a timely way.

My solution is this: When I buy a full bag of lemons or limes, I slice several and freeze them on a tray, then bag them for future use.

I zest the rest, and spread the zest on parchment paper to dry before bottling. After zesting, I slice and juice those fruits, divide the juice in an ice cube tray, freeze, then bag the cubes for use in recipes. A quick 10 seconds in the microwave will thaw slices or juice for immediate use. Presto! Fresh lemon or lime slices, juice or zest whenever I want it! — Mary Z., via email

Heloise says: Before juicing, roll the fruit on the counter to "loosen up" or "activate" the juices inside.

Dear Heloise: I've noticed my makeup brushes are looking scary. Help! — Sarah T. in Kentucky

Heloise says: Sarah, no worries! We should all clean our powder brushes about once per week, and brushes for liquid applications ideally every day, to keep bacteria away.

The best cleanser? Baby shampoo! Here we go:

1. Wet the bristles under a bit of running water. Don't run the water over the handle — the water will seep inside and could loosen the glue.
2. Work in the shampoo to a brush's bristles.
3. Rinse again, avoiding the handle.
4. Squeeze excess water out.
5. Lay flat on a towel to dry overnight.

Dear Heloise: Here's how I make a travel eye (sleep) mask:

I fold a facial tissue in quarters lengthwise and crease. Then I daub a fingerprint-size pat of hand lotion on my temples. Next, I "glue" the tissue across the bridge of my nose and over my eyes, and secure it to my head.

My friends may laugh at me, but this keeps the light out, and it's soft and comfortable! — Helen M. in Illinois

Considerations for high-income, high-debt professionals

Doctors, lawyers and other highly-trained professionals often have their sights on lucrative salaries once they complete their courses of study – but many are also saddled with a less pleasant graduation gift: outstanding student loans. For those who’ve landed a well-paying job in their desired fields, the dual reality of commanding a big salary while being encumbered with debt can lead to financial mistakes. But, as with many complexities in life, having a plan in place can help.

If you find yourself in the camp of high-income, high-debt professionals, consider the following four steps to manage your finances, pay down your obligations and pave the way to a confident financial future.

1. Spend wisely

PROVIDED BY HOLLEY SMALDONE-CRAGG

The income you earn today may seem staggering compared to what you were accustomed to in the years before receiving your degree. Before you increase your spending, it’s important to take a step back and consider how to tackle multiple financial goals at once. Start by earmarking part of each paycheck for your future goals. Knowing you have dedicated savings for future purchases like a new home or sending your kids to college can help you have confidence in your everyday finances – including an occasional splurge. However, until you have your other debts paid off or dramatically reduced, it may not be prudent to take on a large mortgage or a loan for an expensive vehicle.

2. Manage your debt effectively

Keep up on student debt and if you can, consider accelerating your payments. Paying extra will not help you eliminate the debt sooner, but will reduce the total amount you pay in interest. Refinancing the debt to ease your monthly payment schedule may be an option, but given your likely cash flow, it may not be necessary. If you have accrued other debts such as car loans or credit card borrowing, repay them as quickly as possible. Make it a priority to reduce the impact that debt has on your monthly budget.

3. Start saving for retirement

A good rule of thumb for any young professional is to try to save 10 percent (and more, if possible) of their income in accounts designed to build wealth for the long run. While the idea of retirement may seem a lifetime away, starting to accumulate money in a retirement account as soon as possible can be especially effective. Those who begin saving for retirement in their 20s or early 30s can most effectively leverage the power of compounding interest. At this age, you have time on your side and the ability for your investments to grow over the decades to come.

4. Keep it all in perspective

You’ve worked hard to get where you are, and earning a big paycheck is a justifiable reward. Your professional and financial journey is just beginning, so treat your financial life as a marathon, not a sprint. At the very least, focus on living within your means. To the extent you are able, try to live even more modestly with the goal of paying down debts as quickly as possible. You never know what the future holds and what opportunities may arise. Your income level could change, either by your own choice or due to unavoidable circumstances. Take advantage of your good fortune today to strengthen your financial future.

Companies help employees pay off student debt

Tribune News Service

Would millennials want to work for a company that paid off their student loans?

For plenty of college grads with heavy debt loads, the answer is a resounding “yes.”

PwC, formerly known as PriceWaterhouseCoopers, has a popular loan-offset program for employees: PwC pays part of their student loans as a benefit, offering $100 a month in loan payments for up to six years. That can cut loan principal and interest by as much as $10,000 and shorten employees’ debt-payoff period by up to three years. About 8,700 PwC staffers are currently signed up for the benefit and 8,069 are receiving payments. Since launching the program in 2016, PwC — among the first large companies to tackle the student debt issue via loan repayment — has paid off $25.9 million worth of workers’ debt.

Julie Schenck, an accountant with PwC’s mergers and acquisitions division in McLean, Va., finally paid off her entire $3,000 student loan in April after starting a $100-monthly payment plan through work.

She now recommends PwC’s benefit program to other new employees. “I always make sure to ask if it’s something that impacts a new employee, they should get it (the student loan offset) started,” said Schenck. “It really is easy to set up. And you see it coming straight out of your paycheck” directly to the lender. “No one ever says ‘no, thanks,’ because it’s such a great benefit.”

Healthcare giant Abbott offers a similar benefit. Its Freedom 2 Save program helps employees pay down student loan debt while also saving for retirement. The company changed its 401(k) plan to contribute to the retirement accounts of employees making payments on their student loans. If employees pay at least 2% of their salary toward their student loans, the company will contribute an equal amount to their 401(k) accounts.

And at Sotheby’s, when full-time U.S. employees with qualifying college debt make a loan payment, the international auction house will contribute $150 toward the loan principal, up to $1,800 a year. Sotheby’s partnered with Gradifi, a financial employee benefits firm, to create the plan.

Programs like these are becoming a more common benefit among employers. While these are available to employees of any age, they’re especially a boon to young American workers saddled with college debt, which has exploded to $1.5 trillion.

“Millennials have more debt than any prior generation,” says Jon Stein, founder and CEO of Betterment, a financial planning firm and robo-adviser that has expanded into 401(k) retirement plans for businesses. “Some companies are thinking they want to provide debt pay-down in addition to retirement savings. It’s a growing trend.”

Born between 1982 and 2000, millennials earn an average income of $50,406, about 20% less than baby boomers earned at the same stage in life. Yet, they also are increasingly caring about benefits and culture in addition to salary, said Aileen Alexander, who heads the Philadelphia office of Korn Ferry, the executive search firm.

Millennials are now the largest demographic in the U.S. workforce, surpassing the number of baby boomer workers, according to Wells Fargo, so employers are embracing amenities and new benefits to remain relevant.

“Organizations are getting increasingly creative with attracting talent,” including offering remote-work options, on-site game rooms for ping pong, and health and wellness programs “whether in the form of yoga breaks, gym memberships, smoothie shakes, or birthday holidays,” Alexander said. She knows of one company that, instead of offering tchotchkes to potential hires at job fairs, instead will ask them to choose three nonprofits to which the company will give donations “even if they don’t end up working there.”

Urban Outfitters not only offers “bring your dog to work” as a benefit, but discounted pet insurance. And Sweetgreen, the healthy foods and salad takeout chain, recently announced that it is giving mothers, fathers, adoptive parents, and foster parents five months of paid parental leave.

“We believe it’s our responsibility to lead the way given the U.S. is one of the few countries that does not mandate any paid leave for new parents,” the company said.

Meanwhile, the popularity of a student-loan payment program is likely to keep growing, among workers of all ages. According to a 2018 survey by CommonBond, 78% of employees with current or future student loan debt want their company to offer this benefit, and 65% of employees ages 55 and also want the same opportunity.

“We’ve learned that student loan debt affects a much larger proportion of the workforce than previously realized,” said Leigh Gross, CommonBond’s vice president of partnerships.

Financial wellness programs that feature student loan benefits can increase employee engagement and retention, regardless of age group, the survey reveals. But for millennials, such programs can make all the difference in where they choose to work.

Whether it’s for cooling or cooking, this business has the goods

Finger Lakes Restaurant Equipment is thriving in its third year of operation

By DAVID L. SHAW
dshaw@fltimes.com

SENECA FALLS — Restaurants have a few basic kitchen needs, like the equipment needed to cook food, as well as freeze and cool it.

Finger Lakes Restaurant Equipment provides both, new and used, to an ever-growing number of restaurants. That includes the recently opened Corner Deli and Bakery in downtown Waterloo and the soon-to-be-reopened former Abigails Restaurant in Seneca Falls, which will be known as Barkley’s Riverside.

Seneca Falls resident Joe Velte owns Finger Lakes Restaurant Equipment. He and his fiancée, Jennifer Maine, run it with accounting help from Velte’s mom, Sue.

Joe worked in the heating, ventilation and air conditioning business for several years before delving into restaurant equipment.

“I’ve always been able to fix and find things,” he said. “I’d go to auctions to buy industrial kitchen equipment and found a new pizza oven for someone. Whenever a restaurant or supermarket would close, I’d be there for the auction to bid on its ovens and refrigerating equipment. I’d fix and clean them up to look good and work well, and I’d sell it to other restaurants that are opening up.”

Finger Lakes Restaurant Equipment offers refurbished equipment for a much lower price than companies in Rochester, Syracuse and Ithaca that do the same thing, Velte said. And, they provide a guarantee to customers.

“We buy used commercial refrigerators, ice makers, confection ovens, meat grinders and slicers, grills, fryers and ovens of all sizes, stainless steel tables and different sizes of cooler and freezers,” Velte said.

The company bids against other buyers when they hear of equipment being available.

“Our reputation is good, and we often get first dibs on equipment,” Velte said. “We wash them, steam-clean them, polish them, and myself and my longtime mechanic, Kory VanZile, go through them to make sure everything that needs replacement is replaced and everything works perfectly. Each piece goes through extensive testing before it goes out the door.”

Jennifer handles the company’s online computer work and orders.

The company will ship its equipment anywhere, including Texas and Florida. The company has a 26-foot box truck to make many of the deliveries throughout upstate New York.

Finger Lakes Restaurant Equipment sells new equipment too, dealing with three brands: Miglani, Atosa and Omcan.

The company supplies retirement homes, schools and concession stands with kitchen equipment, along with businesses like Downtown Deli, Ciccino’s, Miss V’s, F-n-A Rhythm & Booze, Coach’s Diner, Rich & Vern’s Short Stop, and all four Parker’s Grille and Tap Houses. Club 86 and Uncle Joe’s in Geneva are customers, also.

“We sell for a low price, but we make a living,” Velte said. The company rents space from Manhill Vending owner Tom Hilimire on Auburn Road.

“We like the space here and don’t have any plans to move,” Velte said. “It’s well set up for what we do.”

“If someone asks for restaurant kitchen items and we don’t have it, I’ll get it for them somewhere else,” he added.

Spoke Cycle opens in Victor

VICTOR — Spoke Cycle, a premium indoor beat-based cycling studio specializing in high-energy, full-body workouts for all fitness levels, has opened in the Highpoint Business Park at 300 High St.

The location, owned and operated by Ashley Robinson, will mark her first studio. Robinson moved from Boston to Rochester with a passion for beat-based cycling and to create an unparalleled indoor cycling experience for fitness enthusiasts in the Greater Rochester area.

“We promise an experience you will find nowhere else in the Greater Rochester area, as we aspire to empower and challenge our riders, all while having a good time. We call it a sweat party,” Robinson said.

The new studio will host a variety of classes daily, combining free weights, core strengthening, stationary cycling and creative choreography.

All classes will take place in the Spoke Studio, shaped in a semicircle. The studio will feature three rows of bikes on three levels and will introduce Rochesterians to Schwinn A.C. Performance bikes. These bikes are engineered to resemble a natural road feel providing a smooth ride. Amenities will include

- Complimentary cycling shoes
 - Full towel service for classes, and Spoke takes care of cleaning the bikes and equipment post workout
 - Retail area including logo-wear, cycling apparel and products
 - Bottled water and a filtered water refill station for those striving to be ecological and environmentally conscious
 - Locker area with bathrooms and changing areas
- In addition, riders will experience inspirational and fun instructors. The company is training its instructors to use their personality, charisma, musicality and enthusiasm to motivate riders to redefine and exceed their expectations.

“We want riders to forget that they’re actually working out,” Robinson said.

To celebrate its opening, Spoke Cycle is offering two classes for $25 for those who sign up at www.spokeycyclegndfitness.com

For those new to high-energy indoor cycling classes, it’s much more than pedaling on a stationary bike. All classes will offer a low-impact, high-cardio workout suitable to any fitness level. Workouts combine cardio and strength conditioning, which has proven to be the best way to burn calories fast, gain lean muscle mass and shed body fat.
